

SOCIOLOGY 315: Sociology of Education

Course Description and Objectives: The U.S. education system is currently under critical review for failing to achieve expected levels of academic performance. This is particularly true at the primary and secondary levels but it is also a reasonable critique of higher education. In this respect, the U.S. education system stands at a critical juncture in history. In this course we explore the historical precedents that structure the current education system as a means of understanding how individual factors such as race, ethnicity, social class and gender drive educational outcomes in this country. In turn, we will also pay particular attention to how institutional factors, such as funding (private vs. public), academic governing bodies, faculty direction (research vs. teaching) and so on, influence educational results. In short, this course explores how educational institutions affect students' learning outcomes. This course will be run in a seminar fashion, and as a result, student participation in discussions will be absolutely imperative to both the individual success of students and the course itself.

Student Learning Outcomes

1. Detail interactions between American schools and American culture and society.
2. Describe the relationships of public attitudes to educational realities.
3. Examine the consequences on disadvantaged children of their unequal treatment in education.
4. Know the history of inequality in education.
5. Summarize problems with old-style IQ tests, attempts to disassociate intelligence testing from culture, and different types of intelligences.
6. Describe the two sides in the ongoing debate about whether American education should remain strictly the three R's vs. multipurpose.
7. List the complex multiplicity of issues involved in funding education.
8. Develop effective writing skills.

Assignments/Exams

Participation (20%):

Part I (10%): This class will include both lecture and discussion. For this reason, it is expected that students read the assigned material before class so that they can actively participate in classroom discussions. It should go without saying but active participation requires students to be present in the classroom. If a student misses an extensive amount of class (more than 3 classes), his/her participation grade will drop significantly.

Part II (10%): Most Fridays (8 in all, specific dates highlighted below) I expect students to come to class prepared to discuss and analyze a particular newspaper article through the lens of the concepts that we are discussing that week (i.e., tracking, testing, social capital, etc.). For this assignment I expect students to: (1) regularly read a professional news source such as the New York Times, The Economist, The Los Angeles Times, The BBC, The Denver Post, etc., (2) each week choose an article that fits with the core theme for the class that week, (3) print the article and read it and (4) jot down several discussion questions for the class to consider. In class I will expect each student to be prepared to provide a brief review of his/her article and then we will all discuss the student generated discussion questions. At the end of class students will turn in their articles along with their discussion questions (be sure to write your name on your article!).

Reflective essay (10%): Early in the semester you will write a point-counterpoint essay concerning the emerging role of private corporations in the education system. Instructions for this assignment are provided on the course website. The essay is due in class on 02/13/2012.

Midterm exam (20%): A midterm exam will be given on February 29th and March 2nd. The exam consists of true/false questions, multiple choice questions and short essays. If you read and attend lecture you will be well prepared for the exam. A brief in-class review will be provided as well.

Final paper (20%): Students will pick a research topic related to the class and write a six to eight page essay. Each student will also provide an in-class presentation related to their research topic. The paper can be on any topic related to the course with written approval or in consultation with the instructor. Each student should begin to develop his or her paper topic early in the semester. The primary requirement of the paper is that you incorporate sociological concepts into your research topics (i.e., social capital, stratification, tracking, etc.). Each student must submit a topic paragraph to the instructor by 02/27/2012 and the final paper is due 04/18/2012. Literature used to develop the paper must be from professional, peer-reviewed journals and other academic sources.

Final Presentation (10%): Students will present their final paper topics in class during the last few weeks of the semester. Presenters are allotted 15 minutes each. Students should focus on presenting the basic argument of their final paper as clearly and concisely as possible. Each presenter should allot several minutes at the end for feedback and suggestions.

Final Exam (20%): Students will take a comprehensive final exam during finals week. The format of the exam will be similar to that of the midterm, and while it will focus on the second half of the semester, students should be prepared to answer questions pertaining to the first half of the semester as well. The exam will be held in class on Tuesday, May 8th at 8:00am.

Written work: All written work must be typed, double-spaced, 12-point font (Garamond or Times New Roman preferred), with 1” margins on all sides. Papers may not be turned in via e-mail unless I request a digital copy. Late papers will be penalized with a 10 point deduction for each day after the deadline.

Extra Credit: For each essay, if you utilize the writing lab I will increase your final grade for that particular assignment by 5 percent. (Note: You will need to provide edited drafts with your final essay.)

Persons with Disabilities: If you have any sort of disability or personal problem which prevents the fullest expression of your abilities, please let me know as soon as possible during the semester - before it interferes with your work - so that I can make a reasonable accommodation for your needs.

Academic Misconduct: Taking the easy way out will have real consequences in this class. Plagiarism, cheating, or any other form of academic dishonesty will not be tolerated. Any student engaging in academic dishonesty will be dropped from the course and formal charges will be brought before the Department Chair.
